BETTER SCHOOL FACILITIES
FOR COUNTRY CHILDREN.Of course the loss by fire of the school building at Somersfield will result in no little inconvenience to the children who were enrolled as pupils and will temporarily interrupt the progress of the school work, but the trustworthy promises to have its compensations.Already the people of that and neighboring sections are planning to meet the situation in such a way that the school facilities will be no very greatly improved and to the advantage of several hundred school children who are now divided among several small schools. Steps have been taken to hold a mass meeting of citizens in the communities of Som-ersfield, Addison and Markleysburg with a view to arousing interest in and to cause consideration to be given to a proposal to erect a community school at a central point.This movement shows that the people of this section are keeping abreast of the times in the better development of schools in the rural districts and that they have the disposition to provide their children with the advantages now being enjoyed elsewhere through the medium of the consolidated school. The trend of this development in rural education, in this and many other states, is not to bring the school to the pupil by dotting the landscape with one-room school buildings within easy reach of a comparatively few pupils; but to bring the pupils to a school in which a more varied course of study can be pursued, including higher branches, which are not possible to be given in the small schools.Supplementing the small school houses
by a single structure at a central point creates a new condition with respect to the distance to be traveled by many pupils but this problem is being solved in a very effective and satisfactory way through the use of motor-driven busses. Operating on a fixed schedule they cover the outlying districts with regularity and transport children to and from the school with maximum comfort to the young folks and with infinitely less danger to their health than results from trudging through rain, snow and which which is the disagreeable experience of all children attending the one-room schools scattered throughout the townships.The new order, may, and does, involve increased expenditures for schools, at least during the inauguration of the consolidated school, but the advantages to be gained are so much greater from every point of view, and chiefly through an enlargement of the courses of instruction and the opportunities for fostering the community spirit, that the additional outlay will be more than compensated.
Children of the country districts have the right to demand the same educational advantages as their town or city cousins. They need a diversification of instruction and specialization along lines related to country life is a greater degree, perhaps, than town school children for the reason that our educational system, as applied to the country school, has too long neglected giving attention to importing instruction which will prepare country children for their future work
and activities as well as the instruction in the town and city schools is designed to prepare their pupils for business, industry and the professions.It has not been clearly demonstrated that better education will check the drift from the farm to the city because improved facilities in the country schools are by no means general, but it is reasonable to presume that as children are better educated in the things that pertain to country life the tendency will be for a larger percentage of them to make some form of country activity their life work.That Smithfield farmer who plows
by electric light is undoubtedly making a much more profitable use of his time than some of the daylight savers.The decision of the Harrisburg judge who holds that an officer who chances to be a witness of a crime cannot make an arrest without a warrant will dispose some persons to observe that the chief function of the law, as it is being interpreted, is to protect criminals rather than to protect society.

The Endurance Dance.

"May I have the next dance?"
"Certainly," came around on the fourth day from now. —Gannett Times.However, a good deal of the marathon dancing is standing still to music. —Chicago News.It is time now to consider the expenditure of countless millions of persons wishing to dance to pass a few of the 10 hours, before allowed to appear in a hallroom. —Columbia State.None of these emulations make makes great impression on an experienced dancer. —Pittsburgh Sun.Can it be that the dance and how people are responsible for the endurance dance industry? —Gannett News-Courier.Of course it's an entirely different proposition, but we wonder how long the young women who broke the long-distance dancing record could walk
the floor carrying a colicky baby. —
Columbia Dispatch.We suppose the long distance run showing contest will be the next. It ought to be put out by the field of athletes. —Arkansas Democrat.Classified

Former Mount Pleasant Man Runs Factory in California On Plan for Moral Uplift

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, May 1.—Elmer Galley, who had been visiting with his mother and brothers here, left yesterday for his home at Hollywood, Cal.

Mr. Galley has a factory for the manufacture of patent window screens and employs between 40 and 50 men. He is located one square from the Douglas Fairbanks' studio. He employs at his factory men who have done penal servitude but who have not become hardened to a life of crime. If these men, whether they be in penitentiary or jail, signify they would like to do better they are taken by Mr. Galley and given employment. If the start given them enables them to take up something better, they move on and other unfortunate take their place. Each Friday evening meal is served at the works and a chapel service is held. There has never been a scarcity of persons to preach as ministers are much interested in the movement.

With the return of Mr. Galley to his home he will enlarge his factory and make odd pieces of furniture as ordered by persons interested in this kind of thing orders. He will make anything from a folding bed to a table.

David Bowers' Funeral.

Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon for David Bowers, in charge of Rev. J. D. Good. Interment followed in the Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Starving Business To Feed the Sharks

DURING the year 1921, seven hundred and fifty millions of dollars were lost in the United States in speculative schemes. Thousands of men and women who could ill afford to lose a dollar had their life savings swept away. In that period of business depression when working capital was so sorely needed to bring back good times, worthy enterprises were denied financial help. The money that would have saved many a good business went instead into the hands of unscrupulous sharks.

This unfortunate condition prevails so generally and so continuously that the banks, the recognized investment houses and financial underwriters are trying through educational advertising to instruct the public in the matter of investments.

The H. L. Beach Company specializes in the re-financing of established concerns and does not sell the securities of new commercial promotions. Before we undertake to aid in the expansion of any enterprise we know everything there is to know about the business and the men in it. When we offer securities to the public these carry the absolute minimum of risk and the maximum of safety. That is not hard to understand when it is remembered that our reputation is involved in every stock we sell. Protecting our customers we are at the same time protecting our own business. Beware the stranger who promises a fortune in dividends. Invest your savings in sound, going concerns and be satisfied with a fair return on your money.

The charms of silver and gold, as applied to dress, show no signs of abatement. At first we took the application of metal to our gowns with more or less amusement and not the least show of seriousness. We used it in a spirit of indulgence. Then we began to see how really distinguished our gowns appeared. Now, as we look about at the passing winter styles and the coming ones for spring, we see innumerable touches of metal and some frocks and costumes made solely of this material.

Metal studs are charming in many more ways than one. They have a way of touching up a dress whenever so little a quality is used so that it looks much more worthy of public attention than it did before the glittering trimmings were added. They need no trimmings. They cannot stand extra decorations. They are sufficient in themselves.

During the last winter the best-dressed women in New York wore metal frocks for evening. One was able to pick them out as the most stunning of all the women in any room full of people. And in every instance the metal gowns were made so that their own materials were the center and the art of the gown's design. Now that the spring styles are being shown at the American designers' places, we see these metal materials appearing constantly in the collections—sure proof that the style is not going to lay down in its hands just because spring is here, but that it has decided to go right on with its expression.

Bright Turban Should Grace the Dark Suit

Turbans of brilliant brocades go nicely with the darker and more conservative types of suits, observed a Paris fashion writer. Then there are the little blacked felt and straw hats that have those mushroom brims and turn down all the way around. They are sometimes trimmed with flat masses of embroidery, and again they show wide and spreading bows of ribbon on one side, and again they have bunches of flowers massed together either across the front or in a specified place at one side.

Lace and lace veils are used for trimming many of the little hats that are to be placed in a more dressy class. They are done in the color of the hat, all or black or white or brown or tan or gray, as the case may be. Not much of the lace is done in any brighter tones.

Colors for the spring will be green and all shades of tan and gray, with some touches of red and orange. These, when used carefully, are the things that will help the American woman to express the sort of fashions which are her natural bent.

Shoe Buckle Ornaments Must Have the Fringe

Shoe ornaments for spring are not complete without their accompanying fringe, and the character of this appendage is quite different from that we have known in the past. Metal plays an important part, and one finds it worked in chaplet effect with beads of various outlines. A great deal of lapis blue is shown, and one number of this sort introducing a deep fringe of blue beads combined with long back beads that drop from a decorative buckle of black gaudy. Striped beads add an odd effect to many of these novelties. Buckles that are in great demand include some entirely new ones which are an initial design, and these are a striking peacock hue, a brilliant color ascribed to the crepe.

REVEAL CULTURE OF ETHIOPIANS

Tombs of 50 Kings Opened by Harvard-Boston Expedition.

HAD SCRIPT OF THEIR OWN

The history of the ancient Kingdom of Ethiopia through the long span of 1,500 years—from 750 B. C. to 350 A. D.—has been completed in principal outlines by excavations in tombs and pyramids in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan by the Harvard-Boston expedition headed by Professor George A. Reisner.

The most recent researches of the expedition in the pyramids at Meroe have established that the culture of the Ethiopians stood as an outpost of Egyptian civilization in middle Africa. Dr. Reisner said in the report which he has just made; that in the art of the Ethiopians a Greek influence obtained and that in the invention of a script of their own was evidence that the Ethiopians were people of genius.

The Ethiopians, Dr. Reisner declared, are not and were not African negroes. He described them as "dark colored races in which brown prevailed," adding, however, that many individuals show a mixture of black blood.

Discoveries at Meroe.

This latest report from Dr. Reisner has to do principally with discoveries at Meroe, which is not far from Khartoum and some 200 miles south of Luxor and the Valley of the Kings, where the discovery of the King Tut-Ankh-Amen tomb was recently made. The report picks up the main outlines of the history of Ethiopia from 350 B. C. where Dr. Reisner's earlier report of researches at Napata left off. The capital of Ethiopia was changed from Napata to Meroe at that time. Dr. Reisner, whose report from Napata made it possible for the first time to write the history of Ethiopia from 750 B. C. to 350 B. C., now brings the story of the kingdom in main outline through the following six and a half centuries up to its conquest by the Abyssinians about 350 years after Christ.

The principal achievement of the expedition during the last three years, under the auspices of Harvard University and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, has probably been scientific examination and analysis of the fifty royal tombs in the cemetery at Meroe, and the resulting determination of the chronological basis for the history of Ethiopia during the Merottic era, the report indicated.

"The period is a long one, and to the layman the effort to fix the order of fifty royal tombs, scattered in apparent confusion on two separate hills may appear almost hopeless, although the procedure is really quite simple," said Dr. Reisner.

The custom of Sati-Burial, according to which the members of the king's household killed themselves or were killed when he died and were buried in the same tomb, prevailed at Meroe from the second century B. C. onward, says Dr. Reisner.

"The great outstanding feature of the history of Ethiopia was that the Ethiopian culture unit stood as an outpost of Egyptian civilization in middle Africa," Professor Reisner said. "Ethiopia had become thoroughly Egyptianized while it was under the sway of Egypt, and the Egyptian influence, though gradually diminishing, remained dominant for hundreds of years."

Their Own Script.

"The Ethiopians, however, were not so entirely dependent on Egyptian civilization as this might seem to indicate, for they invented a script of their own, as few other nations have done, unique in the form of the letters adapted only to the writing of their own peculiar language. The cursive was invented first for the practical purposes of daily life and caused an immediate decline in the knowledge of Egyptian; and when the knowledge of Egyptian hieroglyphics was lost they invented a hieroglyphic script of their own. These inventions are valuable that the genius of the people of Meroe is not to be underestimated."

The excavations also uncovered a few objects of Greek art, a considerable quantity of objects of Hellenistic-Roman art, nearly all of them manifestly imported, and some forms of native pottery derived from Hellenistic forms, showing that there was a Greek influence on Ethiopian art.

"At always throughout Ethiopia," Dr. Reisner said, "the burial chambers of every tomb which we excavated had been plundered, and usually very completely plundered. The most important objects of local manufacture found by the expedition were the products of the goldsmiths, Dr. Reisner said. These included a series of twenty gold seal rings dating from about 100 B. C. to about 100 A. D., thirty silver seal rings of about the same date, nine pairs of ornate gold buttons, six pairs of pendant earrings of gold or ornate gold, ten necklaces and seven bracelets and a number of gold amulets disconnected from necklaces or bracelets."

First Find of California Gold.

The first nugget found by Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California, was worth 50 cents, and the second brought $5. The first big nugget was found shortly afterwards by a soldier of Stevenson's regiment in a little stream as he was leaning over to take a drink. It weighed between 20 and 25 pounds.

A much more valuable nugget was found by four miners, who were so wary that in bringing it to San Francisco, where it was placed on exhibition, one of them was always on guard, night and day. It was such a magnificent specimen that it was taken to the eastern states for exhibition. There the owners quarreled, because involved in litigation with one another and lawyers got the entire proceeds. John L. Considine in Adventure Magazine.

Labor Officials

Gather Today for Richmond Parley

By Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, May 1.—Dr. C. B. Connolly, former Pennsylvania commissioner of labor and industry, and Dr. Royal A. Stecker, present commissioner, will have prominent parts in the four-day convention of labor officials of the United States and Canada, which opens today at Richmond, Va. The attitude of the states on child labor and minimum wage legislation as well as leading industrial problems of the country will be among the leading topics of the Hampshire labor commissioner, present session.

Dr. Connolly is head of the Association of Labor Officials, which met last year. Dr. Stecker, who formerly was head of the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, is in Genoa, Italy, at the convention tonight. At the same time Dr. John R. Andrew, representative of the American Association of Labor Legislation, is scheduled as a speaker.

Today's program will be for address by Dr. Connolly, Dr. Stecker, Dr. Andrew, and Dr. R. A. Stecker. The convention will take up workers' compensation, rehabilitation, employment and mediation with Fred M. Wilmerly was head of the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, is in Genoa, Italy, at the convention tonight. At the same time Dr. John R. Andrew, representative of the American Association of Labor Legislation, is scheduled as a speaker.

Round Issue Approved.

JOHNSTOWN, May 1.—The voters of Adams County have approved a $500,000 school bond issue. The funds will be used for the construction of a new high school building, which, when completed, will house the high school.

CHAPTER V

The Round-Up.
It was a crackling and roaring of fire that awakened Madeline next morning, and the first thing she saw was a huge stone fireplace in which lay a bundle of blazing sticks. Some one had kindled a fire while she slept. For a moment the curious sensation of being lost returned to her. She just dimly remembered reaching the ranch and being taken into a huge house and a huge, dimly lighted room. And it seemed to her that she had come to sleep at once, and had awakened without remembering how she had gotten to bed.

With a knock on the door and a cheerful greeting, Florence entered, carrying steaming hot water.
"Good morning, Miss Hammond. Hope you slept well. You sure were tired last night. I imagine you'll find this old ranch-house as cold as a barn. I'll warm up directly. All's gone with the boys and Bill. We're to ride down on the range after a while when your baggage comes. Breakfast will be ready soon, and after that we'll look about the place."

Madeline was charmed with the old Spanish house, and the more she saw of it the more she thought what a delightful home it could be made. All the doors opened into a courtyard, or patio, as Florence called it. The house was low, in the shape of a rectangle, and so immense in size that Madeline wondered if it had been a Spanish barracks. Florence led her out on a porch and waved a hand at a vast, colored void. "That's what I'll like," she said.

At first Madeline could not tell what was sky and what was land. The immensity of the scene stunned her faculties of conception. She sat down in one of the old rocking-chairs and looked and looked, and knew that she was not grasping the reality of what stretched wondrously before her.

"We're up at the edge of the foothills," Florence said. "I'll sure take you a little while to get used to being up high and seeing so much. That's the secret—up high, the more is clear, and there's the whole world beneath us. Here—see, that cloud of dust down in the valley? It's the round-up. The boys are there, and the cattle. Wait, I'll get the glasses."

"The round-up? I want to know all about it—see it," declared Madeline.
"Please tell me what it means, what it's for, and then take me down there."

"I'll sure open your eyes, Miss Hammond. I'm glad you came to know. Four brothers would have made a big success in this cattle business if it hadn't been for crooked work by rival ranchers. Well, make it yet, in spite of them."
"Indeed he shall," replied Madeline. "But tell me, please, all about the round-up."

"Well, in the first place, every cattlemen has to have a brand to identify his stock. Without it no cattlemen, nor half a hundred cowboys, if he had no brand, could ever recognize all the cattle in a big herd. There are no fences on our ranges. They are all open to everybody. Every year we have two big round-ups, but the boys do some branding all the year. A calf should be branded as soon as it's found. This is a safeguard against cattle-theft. We don't have the rustling of herds and bunches of cattle like we used to."

"We have our big round-up in the fall, when there's plenty of grass and water, and all the riding-stock as well as the cattle are in fine shape. The cattlemen in the valley meet with their cowboys and drive in all the cattle they can find. Then they brand and cut out each man's herd and drive it toward home. Then they go or up or down the valley, make another camp, and drive in more cattle. It takes weeks."

For Madeline the morning hours flew by, with a joyful part of the time spent on the porch gazing out over that ever-changing vista. At noon a thunder drove up with her trunk. The while Florence helped the Mexican women get lunch Madeline unpacked part of her effects and got out things for which she would have immediate need. After lunch she changed her dress for a riding-habit and, going out side, found Florence waiting with the horses.

As Madeline rode along she made good use of her eyes. The soil was sandy and porous, and she understood why the rain and water from the low springs disappeared so quickly. What surprised her was the fact that, though she and Florence had seemed to be riding quite awhile, they had apparently not drawn any closer to the round-up. The slope of the valley was noticeable after some miles had been traversed.

Gradually black dots enlarged and assumed shape of cattle and horses moving round a great dusty patch. In another half-hour Madeline rode behind Florence to the outskirts of the scene of action. A roar of trumpeting hoofs filled her ears. The lines of marching cattle had merged into a great, moving herd half obscured by dust.

The bawling and bellowing, the rattling of horns and pounding of hoofs, the dusty whirl of cattle, and the yelling cowboys disconcerted Madeline and frightened her a little.

"Look, Miss Hammond, there's Don Carlos!" said Florence. "Look at that black horse!"
Madeline saw a dark-faced Mexican riding by. He was too far away for her to distinguish his features, but he reminded her of an Italian brigand. He bestrode a magnificent horse.

Stillwell rode up to the girls then and greeted them in his low voice.
"Right in the thick of it, hey? Well, that's sure fine. I'm glad to see, Miss Madeline, that you ain't afraid of a little dust or smell of burnin' hide an' hair."

Madeline's brother joined the group, evidently in search of Stillwell. "Bill, Nels just rode in," he said.
"Good! Any news of Danny Malpas?"
"No. Nels said he lost the trail when he got on hard ground."

"Well, well. Say, Al, your sister is sure takin' to the round-up. An' the boys are gittin' wise. See that sur-of-a-gun Ambrose cuttin' capers all around. Hell sure do his bestest. Ambrose is a liddle man, he thinks."

The two men and Florence joined in a little pleasant teasing of Madeline, and drew her attention to what appeared to be really unnecessary facts of horsemanhood all made in her vicinity. The cowboys noticed their interest in covert glances while receding a horse or while passing to and fro. It was all too serious for Madeline to be amused at that moment. She did not care to talk. She sat her horse and watched.

CHAPTER VI

A Gift and a Purchase.
For a week the scene of the round-up lay within riding-distance of the ranch-house, and Madeline passed most of this time in the saddle, watching the strenuous labors of the vaqueros and cowboys. She underestimated her strength, and more than once had to be lifted from her horse. Stillwell's pleasure in her attendance gave place to concern. He tried to persuade her to stay away from the round-up, and Florence grew even more solicitous.

Madeline, however, was not moved by their entreaties.
She grasped only dimly the truth of what it was she was learning—something infinitely more than the rounding up of cattle by cowboys, and she was loath to lose an hour of her opportunity.

Before the week was out, however, Alfred found occasion to tell her that it would be wiser for her to let the round-up go without gracing it further with her presence. He said it laughingly; nevertheless, he was serious. And when Madeline turned to him in surprise, he said, bluntly:
"I don't like the way Don Carlos follows you around. Bill's afraid that Nels or Ambrose or one of the cowboys will take a fall out of the Mexican. They're fishing for the chance. Of course, dear, it's absurd to you, but it's true."

Around it certainly was, yet it served to show Madeline how intensely occupied she had been with her own feelings, roused by the tumult and tall of the round-up. She recalled that Don Carlos had been presented to her, and that she had not liked his dark, striking face with its bold, prominent, glittering eyes and sinister lines; and she had not liked his snave, sweet, insinuating voice or his subtle manner, with its slow bows and gestures.

Don Carlos has been after Florence for a long time," said Alfred. "He's not a young man by any means. He's fifty, Bill says; but you can seldom tell a Mexican's age from his looks. Don Carlos is well educated and a man we know very little about. Mexicans of his stamp don't regard women as we white men do. Now, my dear, beautiful sister from New York, I haven't much use for Don Carlos; but I don't want Nels or Ambrose to make a wild throw with a rope and pull the Don off his horse. So you had better ride up to the house and stay there."

"Alfred, you are joking, teasing me," said Madeline.
"Indeed not," replied Alfred. "How about it, Flo?"

Florence replied that the cowboys would upon the slightest provocation treat Don Carlos with less ceremony and gentleness than a roped steer. Old Bill Stillwell came up to her impromptu by Alfred regarding the conduct of cowboys on occasion, and he not only corroborated the assertion, but added emphasis and evidence of his own.

"An' Miss Madeline," he concluded, "I reckon if Don Stewart was ridin' for me, the gallopin' Greaser would hev hed a bump in the dust before now."

Madeline had been wavering between sobriety and laughter until Stillwell's mention of his idea of cowboy chivalry decided in favor of the laughter. "I am not convinced, but I surrender," she said. "You have only some occult motive for driving me away. I am sure that handsome Don Carlos is being unjustly suspected. But as I have seen a little of cowboys' singular imagination and gallantry, I am rather inclined to fear their possibilities. So good-by."

Then she rode with Florence up the long, gray slope to the ranch-house. That night she suffered from excessive weariness, which she attributed more to the strange working of her mind than to riding and sitting her horse. Morning, however, found her in no disposition to rest. It was not actively that she craved, or excitement, or pleasure. An unerring instinct, rising clear from the thronging sensations of the last few days, told her that she had misused something in her mind, that something was, she had half-fading intimations of it, hopes that faded on the verge of realizations, haunting promises that were unfulfilled. Whatever it was, it had remained hidden and unknown at home, and here in the West it began to stir and drive her to discovery. Therefore she could not rest; she wanted to go and see; she was no longer chasing phantoms; it was a hunt for treasure that held aloof, as intangible as the substance of dreams.

Then the morning after the end of the round-up, when she went out on the porch, her brother and Stillwell appeared to be arguing about the identity of a horse.
"Well, I reckon it's my old roan," said Stillwell, shading his eyes with his hand.
"Bill, if that isn't Stewart's horse, my eyes are going back on me," replied Al. "It's not the color or shape—the distance is too far to judge by that. It's the motion—the swing."

"At, maybe you're right. But they ain't no rider up on that boss. Flo, fetch my glass."

Florence went into the house, while Madeline tried to discover the object of attention. Presently far up the gray hollow along a foothill she saw dust, and then the dark, moving figure of a horse. She was watching when Florence returned with the glass. Bill took a long look, adjusted the glasses carefully, and tried again.
"Well, I hate to admit my eyes are gettin' poor. But I guess I'll say to that. That's Don Stewart's horse, saddle, an' countin' at a fair clip without a rider. It's amazing strange, an' some in keepin' with other things concernin' Gene."

"Give me the glass," said Al. "Yes, I was right. Bill, the horse is not frightened. He's coming steadily; he's got something on his mind."

The wide hollow sloping up into the foothills lay open to unobstructed view, and less than half a mile distant Madeline saw the ridiculous horse coming along the white trail at a rapid canter. A shrill, piercing whistle pealed in.

"Well, he's seen us, that's sure," said Bill.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE POWER OF A LIE" showing today at this theatre, provides splendid entertainment. Brilliant people in a brilliant circle of society pass through the scalding shame of sensational scandal in the strange story, "The Power of a Lie." "The Power of a Lie" is said to be one of those exceptional stories that come once in a while to judge public and have the chief effect, above all other qualities, of shocking indolent intellects into an alert attention. For the story of "The Power of a Lie" is written as a play and novel by John Galsworthy, a keen thinker of Norway, is not a tale such as one finds in ordinary fiction channels. It is dynamic, forceful, trenchantly telling a truth about life in a fashion that is hardly that of the prosaic, complacent writer of "best sellers." As a literary product it attracts those critics who pay no attention whatever to the ordinary run of entertaining but meaningless novels and plays. Nobel Laureate Scott, David Torrance, June Riddle, Earl Metcalf, Maude George and Phillips Smalley handle the principal roles.

Wednesday and Thursday, "The Power of a Lie" with Frank Mayo in the leading role, will be shown.

THE SOISSON.

"CAN A WOMAN LOVE TWICE?" Showing today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents Ethel Clayton in one of the best roles of her career. Miss Clayton and Malcolm McGregor make an ideal pair of lovers in "Can a Woman Love Twice?" But there is a strange romance indeed. For Miss Clayton is seen as a young mother who is posing as the widow of a soldier believed to have been killed in France, and McGregor is seen as the soldier—but far from dead. Naturally he is surprised to find on his arrival home that he has been preceded by his "widow" and baby "son," for he never saw either of them in his life before. Further complications pile one on the other for the father is estranged from the son, and the three take up residence under the same roof. The father loves his supposed daughter-in-law and his son, and the girl's feeling for the father, and her love for her son bring about a state of affairs that dramatically develop into one of the most smashing climaxes ever seen.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "Can a Woman Love Twice?" with Frank Mayo in the leading role, will be shown.

THE ORPHEUM.

"BACK HOME AND BROKE," the feature picture today and tomorrow at this theatre, is one of the best productions in which Thomas Meighan, the popular Paramount star, has ever appeared. There's a man a long time to return to his old home town who doesn't become a would-be want to come. "Back Home and Broke," as expressed in the title of Mr. Meighan's new picture, "Tom" returns to the old town and he goes through all the embarrassment and humiliation of a man going back to his old town. The strange part of it is that he isn't a failure. You doubtless wonder why instead of going back with a big "splish" he allows the towns people to believe that he has been unsuccessful. The reason is too good to spoil in the telling, any way, the situation must be seen to be appreciated. It provides many scenes of laughter. "The story is an original George Ade tale, written especially for Mr. Meighan by the well known humorist. Like Ade, many times leading woman to Wallace Reid, plays opposite Mr. Meighan when she appeared in "The Prince Chap" and "The Easy Rider." She was a strong and Alfred circuit, who has handled three former Meighan productions, was the director.

Thursday May McAvoy will be seen in "Morris."

THE ORPHEUM.

Byron G. Harlan and his company will be at the Orpheum Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This is an attraction of merit, almost every one who has a photograph has been delighted and amused by the comedy songs of Collins & Harlan, you will see Mr. Harlan—himself—in person, singing those same songs, also you will see just how he makes the records at the great laboratories whose success in a great measure is attributed to the popularity of Collins & Harlan who rank as the foremost comedians, as is attested by the thousands of records that they have made. At least a dozen local people will co-operate in making records, which in turn will be played for the audience.

The attraction is one of novelty for in addition to the comedy songs of Mr. Harlan, the real soprano voice of Miss Mabel Leomis will be heard, while Miss Beth Hamilton will render selections on the violin, a real treat to all lovers of music. Patrons of Keith Vaudeville know Armstrong, "the man of mystery" for he has thrilled and mystified thousands by his tricks of magic and illusions that are word and baffling.

Well-Known Musician Declares Tonic Entirely Overcome Nerveitis and Weakness Left by the Flu—Gains 12 Pounds

"By taking the Tonic treatment I am a gotten rid of troubles which have plagued me for three years, and I am simply overjoyed at my new health," declares Mrs. Mary Varallo, of 503 N. 12th street, Philadelphia, popular organist for the Lady of Angel and St. Ann churches.

Three years ago I had a bad case of the flu which left me with nerveitis. The pains in my chest and shoulders were simply awful. My appetite was gone, and I looked forward to meal-time with dread. I lost considerable weight, could never enjoy a good night's rest, and felt miserable all the time.

"I am on my fourth bottle of the Tonic treatment now and don't have a pain of any kind, but can sleep like a child, and relish all my meals. I have gained twelve pounds, and never felt better in my life. Tonic is just grand."

Tonic is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

STUMPT?

FROM childhood up, we meet stumps every day of our lives.

They either stump us, or we stump them. The more successful we are in jumping stumps, the less are we stumped by stumps.

The most important stumps to watch are those that stump the maintenance of good health.

When Nature sounds her warning and indicates unmistakably the location of a stump—HEED NATURE.

When the mouth tastes bad, breath is foul, stomach distressed, brain foggy, eye dull, remember Beecham's Pills will clear away the stumps of indigestion, constipation and biliousness.

For 80 years this famous family medicine has stumped disorders of stomach, liver and bowels to hold their grip on man, woman or child.

operate in the making of real records on the stage. All those who wish to hear just how their voice or musical instrument sounds on the big disk should make application at once. There is no charge for the change and your friends will envy you, once you have stepped into the charmed circle of record makers. Perhaps your singing or playing may be just the proper quality to reproduce perfectly and possibly bigger things may come of it—who knows? All voices won't show up right on records, you know, and Mr. Harlan is looking for now talent for this ever increasing industry.

When Mr. Harlan was last seen on the stage, he was with the Victor artists and the public gladly paid two dollars for seats and this same attraction is now touring with a substitute for Mr. Harlan at the same prices. It is only through the cooperation of the makers of records and other financial local interests that his many admirers may now have the opportunity of hearing him sing his popular comedy songs and seeing him in person at the popular prices.

STATE THEATRE.

"TAKE IT FROM ME"—The musical comedy triumph of this and last season will be the attraction at the State Theatre, Uniontown, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This is the show that made the State Theatre in Chicago the most popular playhouse of that center, playing there to capacity houses for nineteen weeks and then obliged to move to other pastures simply because of previous bookings that could not be changed. We are promised a really good, good fast comedy, pretty girls, and stunning clothes, all of which are some of the good and sufficient reasons why "Take It From Me" is not complaining at the high cost of living, railroad fares, etc., etc., a condition which has become a common complaint with producers endeavoring to see mediocre wares.
